

BEATTY AND WOZNIAK EXTENDS ITS WELCOME TO THE NEW COGCC COMMISSIONERS

On August 8, Governor Hickenlooper appointed three Coloradans to fill vacancies on the Oil and Gas Conservation Commission.

Many probably already know Perry Pearce, who previously served on the Commission and is returning to public service after retiring from ConocoPhillips. Perry is filling the seat previously held by DeAnn Craig.

Kent Jolly is a western slope rancher and royalty owner. He is filling the seat previously held by Tom Compton.

And Ashley Ager of Durango has substantial experience in soil conservation and reclamation. Ashley is replacing Richard Alward.

We extend our thanks to the retiring Commissioners for their hard work and commitment to Colorado, and welcome the new members to the Commission. We look forward to working with them.
